Change in Italian Communique

SIGNOR MUSSOLINI'S resignation resulted in a change in yesterday's Italian communique. Instead of being dated "from the High Command," it was headed "from the Supreme Command," and was signed by General Vittorio Ambrosio, Chief of the General Staff.—(Reuter.)

Italy Under Complete Military Control: New Cabinet

MARSHAL BADOGLIO, new Prime Minister, has placed Italy under martial law, and the army has taken over control of public order throughout the country. Curfew has been proclaimed from dusk till dawn, all assemblies of more than three persons are prohibited, and "force will be used where necessary to bring anyone who disobeys the law to his senses."

A new Cabinet has been formed.

The sudden resignation of Signor Mussolini, stated by the Italian News Agency to have been due to ill-health, was the cause of every kind of rumour throughout the world yesterday.

Proclamation

The text of an order issued by Marshal Badoglio, putting Italy in a virtual condition of martial law, was broadcast by Rome radio yesterday. It said: "Pietro Badoglio has issued the following proclamation:—

"Italians, after the appeal of H.M. the King Emperor to Italians and my proclamation, each one of you must again take up your place at your benches and with your duties. This is not the moment to indulge in demonstrations, because they will not be tolerated. The demands at the present grave hour are soberness, discipline, and patriotism from every one of you. Each one is asked to do everything for the supreme interests of the nation.

"Assemblies are prohibited, and the public authorities have orders to disperse all gatherings. The control of public order has now come under military authorities."

BROADCAST

A broadcast manifesto from Marshal Badoglio, following the proclamation of martial law, placed control of public order in the hands of commanders of army corps and land defences. It also contained these orders:

Force wherever necessary to bring anyone who disobeys the law to his senses; all armed forces, including the Fascist Militia and the police, come under Badoglio's orders; dusk to dawn curfew, when no civilian will be allowed on the streets—the only exceptions being doctors, priests and midwives—and public offices of all kinds, variety theatres, cinemas, and sports halls will be closed; gatherings of more than three persons forbidden either in public or in locked premises; sale of arms and ammunition strictly forbidden; firearms licences cancelled; cars, motor-boats and aircraft can only be used in the public and military service other than by special permit; daily papers limited to one edition; troops, patrols and public authority officials will, if necessary, fire to enforce orders. All offenders will be immediately arrested and tried before military tribunals.

War Cabinet Meets In London

IN London and Washington yesterday the war situation was being re-examined in the light of Signor Mussolini's dramatic resignation.

All available information was considered by the British War Cabinet, which met yesterday, and it is expected that Mr. Churchill will make an early statement in the House of Commons.

A message from a London P.A. Correspondent states: "In Allied circles the resignation, or dismissal, of Signor Mussolini is increasingly regarded as a prelude to peace overtures."

The British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden, saw the American Ambassador, Mr. J. G. Winant, and the Soviet Chargé d'Affaires at the Foreign Office.

Well-informed circles in London were not prepared last night to give any opinion as to whether the new Italian Government has Fascist tendencies or not.

Mr. Cordell Hull, U.S. Secretary of State, made the first official American comment on Mussolini's resignation. He said: "The Italian crisis was brought on by military events, and must temporarily be handled mainly by the military." He denied emphatically that the Allies had been in contact with Badoglio during the past months. He did not anticipate that any change in Allied policy would result from the Italian crisis.

Asked whether the House of Savoy was officially linked with Fascism, he replied that the war with Italy was still in progress, so that the State Department was not yet in a position to lay down lines of policy or courses of action.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said at a Press conference yesterday: "It shows a break in the assurance of the Axis Powers. Everybody feels excited at something which might be the beginning of a crack internally."

German Radio yesterday broadcast the proclamtions and added: "The Italian change of government brings no visible change in the German-Italian relationship. The war goes on, and the people and Government of Italy are more than ever determined to defend their threatened homeland."

Mr. Curtin, Australian Premier, said:—"A dramatic revelation of the complete transformation that has overtaken the European scene during the war. The writing is on the wall."

NEW ROME CABINET

THE new Italian Cabinet was announced by Rome radio last night as follows:—

Foreign Affairs—Dr. Raffaele Guariglia.
Home Affairs—Bruno Fornaciari.
Italian Africa—Senator de Gabba.
Justice—Gaetano Azzariti.
Finance—Domenico Bartolini.
War—General Antonio Sorice.
Navy—Rear-Admiral de Courten.
Air—General Renato Sandalli.
Education—Dr. Leonardo Severi.
Corporations—Dr. Leopoldo Piccardi.
Public Works—Dr. Domenico Romano.
Agriculture and Forestry—Dr. Alessandro Brizi.
Communications — General Frederico Amoroso.
Popular Culture — Dr. Guido Rocco.
Exchange and Money — Dr. Giovanni Acanfora.
War Production—General Carlo Favagrossa.
Under-Secretary of the Premier's Office—Dr. Pietro Baratono.

The seat of the new Italian Government, for the present, will be the Quirinal, it is stated.—(Reuter.)

Dr. Guariglia, the new Foreign Minister, flew yesterday from Ankara to Rome.

He openly opposed Mussolini in the past few months, and, at a conference of Italian diplomats in Rome in the spring, criticised the conduct of the war.

The new Italian Cabinet is described in London as a committee selected to carry on a government of the country until further developments take place.

Statement from Berlin

The first official German comment on Signor Mussolini's fall was made last night by a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman, who said:—"The Italian Government changes had their cause in Italy's internal politics." Two points were stressed — the official statement that the war will go on; the fact that Italy will keep her word.

"The German people take note of these assurances and, aware of their own strength, they will carry on the war to a victorious conclusion."

German radio last night gave this first place in the news, concentrating all its reports to date into one narrative.

EDITOR REPLACED

The editorship of the Giornale d'Italia has been taken over by Senator Alberto Berdamini, said the German News Agency last night. Virginio Gayda had been editor for many years, and was known as "Signor Mussolini's mouthpiece." Berdamini, who is 72, founded the paper in 1901, and edited it until 1924.—(Reuter.)

Future of Huts at Portmarnock

"If the Portmarnock devalopment scheme goes on we shall have to get rid of the huts erected there in the past," Mr. D. J. O'Donovan, Dublin County Commissioner, said yesterday, when it was decided to appeal against a decision of the Circuit Judge in discussing an application by the former Board of Health for a declaration that huts erected on land at Bohernabreena were "temporary buildings."

FURIOUS RUSSIAN ATTACKS NORTH AND SOUTH

AXIS reports, quoted by Reuter yesterday, spoke of the new pitch of intensity reached in Russian attacks on the northern and southern ends of the line.

A wedge has been driven into the German positions near Leningrad, south of Lake Ladoga, but on both fronts, Berlin said, the breaches had been sealed. The German News Agency stated that German reserves had to be thrown in to hold the Soviet attacks at Orel and near Leningrad.

Two new columns are moving from north and west against a tough core of resistance below Bolkhov, where a Soviet force from the east on Sunday threw the Germans from six more fortified points on the west bank of the Oka, cables Reuter's Special Correspondent in Moscow. German reinforcements are still being thrown in to stiffen the dwindling garrisons of the defence points. Some companies of 150 have now been reduced to 30 or 40 men, according to prisoners' statements, and Pravda reports these losses are being sustained entirely by German crack troops.—(Reuter.)

Captain Sertorius, the German overseas news commentator, said last night that it could not yet be judged whether the increase of Soviet pressure south of Lake Ladoga was a temporary move, or whether the Russians planned to establish there a second main centre of operations. "The enemy is now employing considerable forces on the Volkhov, but the German Command has taken counter-measures. That is why the Soviet Divisions have for three days been storming against the fire-spitting gorge of the firm German defence front without any major tactical gain, let alone a strategical success."

Last night's Soviet communique stated:—

"Our troops in the Orel direction advanced 5 to 10 kilometres (3 to 5½ miles) and occupied over 70 inhabited localities."

WHAT POPE SAID ON DAMAGE TO ROME

AN announcement by Vatican Radio on Saturday, quoted by Reuter, said:—

"In the last few days a German News Agency statement appeared in the Press that the Holy Father had sent a personal protest to President Roosevelt following the attack on Rome, and that the American Chargé d'Affaires to the Holy See, Mr. Titmand, had been invited to call at the State Secretarist on the evening of July 19, the day on which the attack took place. Both assertions have no foundation in fact whatsoever.

"It will be valuable to emphasise clearly what the Holy Father has done in connection with the bombing of Rome, since so many rumours have been spread. The Holy Father did two things—he visited the bombed districts and he wrote a letter to the Vicar-General of Rome.

"The following must be said regarding the letter sent to the Vicar-General of Rome, dated July 20:—The Holy Father explains how deeply he recommended to all belligerents fighting on whatever side from the beginning of the conflict the safety of peaceful citizens and of the religious and cultural monuments.

OTHER APPEALS

"This letter is by no means the first document of its kind. In the messages of the Holy Father since the outbreak of war we find again and again admonitions to this effect, which are impartially directed to all for reasons of humanity, civilisation and Christ's love.

"We point particularly to the Easter Message of Pius XII. in 1941, when the air raids on England were in the forefront of the war. In this letter the Holy Father states all the reasons which he submitted to responsible circles on both sides to effect the inviolability of Rome. This passage in the letter gives a hint of the efforts made by the Holy Father to declare Rome an open city. (Here followed passages from the letter dealing with the Pope's démarches.)

"In the letter of July 20 the Holy Father announced the fact of the destruction of the Basilica of San Lorenzo Fuori Mura, but he did this in an objective manner. He did not say that the Basilica was completely destroyed, as was stated in newspapers. Nor did he say that the greatest part of the Basilica was destroyed. What he did say was that a very great part was destroyed.

"In fact, the front part of the Basilica, which is composed of two churches, is almost completely destroyed. The high altar has suffered serious damage. The ancient part behind is, however, apart from the effect of some shell splinters, essentially intact. So also are the crypt and the tomb of Pius XI. Therefore, the Holy Father did not exaggerate. Apart from other reasons, it was his right to mention the fact, since this Basilica was a possession of the neutral Vatican State. Every neutral State raises its voice when its territory is crossed by aircraft, attacked, or violated. Moreover, this Basilica, one of the seven principal churches of Rome and a place of pilgrimage, belongs, in one sense, to the Catholics of the whole world.

NOT INTENTIONAL

"The Holy Father is very willing to believe that the bombs were not intentionally dropped on the Basilica.

"That the Holy Father does not mention the military objectives attacked should not cause any surprise, since this is not his concern. He says expressly in his letter that this painful event proved what he had always warned against—namely, that it was virtually impossible to avoid on this sacred soil of Rome the devastation of revered buildings, even if precautionary measures were taken.

"In his letter the Holy Father says that his words are not intended to incite to anger and hatred, but are only meant to represent an insistent admonition to noble understanding of the exalted conception of Rome.

"It must be emphasised that Rome is indeed something without equal. This singularity should be respected in the interests of civilisation, humanity and Christian love.

AN OPEN CITY

"This statement of the Holy Father is, like the others, not addressed to one of the belligerents, but to both sides.

"It would have been possible actually to make Rome an open city. It must be regretted that, at least up to the present moment, this has not been done.

"The Holy Father is also not unaware that other towns have suffered terribly. Nor is he unaware that churches have been destroyed in the countries of both belligerent sides. The Holy Father is also aware that the injury done to the Mystical Body of Christ weighs much heavier than the destruction of the stone Houses of God, and the disregard of the laws of humanity and morality, of justice and of personality weighs heavier than the violation of cultural monuments. All this the Holy Father has amply judged and condemned in his messages.

"Pius XII. has never failed to call in his messages and elsewhere for prayer for God's mercy for peace. His letter to the Vicar-General of Rome on the occasion of the bombing of Rome ends with a call for prayers for peace."

Air Raids on Three Cities in Germany

A COMMUNIQUE issued by the British Air Ministry yesterday stated:—

"On Sunday night aircraft of Bomber Command made a very heavy attack on Essen. The weather over the target was good, and preliminary reports indicate that the bombing was concentrated and effective.

"Mosquitos of Bomber Command attacked objectives in Hamburg and Cologne. Two enemy aircraft were destroyed by our bombers.

"Mosquitos of Fighter Command, on intruder patrol over North-West Germany, the Low Countries and France, destroyed three enemy aircraft.

"Twenty-five aircraft of Bomber Command and one of Fighter Command are missing from the night's operations."

The Mosquito bomber crews which went to Hamburg were guided to the city by fires, states the British Air Ministry News Service. After the 2,300 tons raid of Saturday night and Sunday's daylight attack by the U.S Army Eighth Air Force, fires in Hamburg had apparently become so much out of control that they could be seen from 70 miles away while the Mosquitos were flying towards the town. Before the Mosquitos bombed there was a violent explosion among the fires.—(Press Association.)

The German News Agency, in announcing the attacks on Essen and other towns, said that heavy losses were again caused among the population, and great devastation was done in the residential quarters of the raided towns. Air defence forces shot down 61 'planes out of the Anglo-American attacking squadrons. Five German fighters were lost.

"Brains Trust" for Irish Industry and Commerce

THE Emergency Scientific Research Bureau must not be allowed to pass out after the war. On its impressive record of almost three years' work it calls out to be established as a permanent institution, a "Brains Trust" at the service of the country in the difficult period when war ends and emergency conditions inevitably continue.

This view was expressed to an Irish Times reporter yesterday by various prominent scientists and industrialists, one of whom summed up the general opinion in these words: "One of the most interesting post-war possibilities is the production in this country of dried foods. We read lately of the establishment in Great Britain of 37 such factories. Could we not support a certain number here, so as to level out the supply of natural foodstuffs over the entire year? A question like that has only one logical source of information—the Research Bureau."

It is understood, writes our reporter, that the whole question of greatly expanded dried food production is now under investigation in Eire.

Day in and day out for almost three years the Bureau's five members, 10 library and accounts staff, 30 permanent technicians, as well as the huge number of outside consultants, have been working on industry's problems. To them, no problem is too great or too small. The results of their work, although unknown to the average citizen, are everywhere.

The question has been raised: In what form should the Bureau continue? That it should be retained almost in its present form was the view of a scientist, who stated that the Bureau got the immediate results which business men wanted because it was free from the ordinary routine of a government department.

To industry, the Bureau is stated to offer the most efficient possible appointments' selection service: to its own personnel the opportunity of meeting with widely - differing problems and activities, and "finding their own groove"—a valuable post-varsity experience for which they are being very adequately paid.

To Irish industry and commerce the existence of the Emergency Scientific Research Bureau is now issuing the challenge: "Do you want to know the best ways of doing your job, and do you want the right men and the best men to assist you in doing that job?"

In Industry's answer may lie the outline of its own future.

Italy's Part in War Effort

BY OUR MILITARY CORRESPONDENT.

THE recent unexpected—almost, indeed, dramatic—changes in the Italian Government very naturally direct attention to the rôle played by Italy in the present world war. The part in question has, in point of fact, been much more considerable than has commonly been understood. There was, of course, during the earlier years the very important geographical position to be considered, as well as the considerable military resources of all kinds permanently in being in the North-Eastern corner of Africa. But, even since the final decision in Tunisia, more than two months ago, the Italian factor has continued to be one of primary importance. At the present juncture it seems desirable to examine this aspect of the war situation under the various headings.

ARMY STRENGTH

Taking army matters first—since land forces are the oldest in point of occurrence, and are still usually conceded priority in most countries—it has to be remembered that Italy at the present time is contributing at least 70 divisions to the Axis quota. The new decision, bringing former Blackshirt divisions specifically under direct Army control, does not entail any appreciable change as regards numerical strengths or territorial distributions. A strength of 70 divisions would probably work out at between one-fifth and one-sixth of the total Axis armed strength in Europe—obviously a very important fraction.

We know nothing exactly regarding the distribution of these divisions. The bulk, of course, are in Italy, including under that heading Sicily and Sardinia. The remainder are distributed in South-eastern France, Corsica, the Balkans and the islands of the Dodekanese. Probably anything from one-third to almost one-half are so allocated. We do know that the tendency has been to replace Italian divisions in the Balkans by Bulgarian or German units. This process was gradual, and was only to be expected according as the Italian home territory became more directly menaced.

THE NAVY

The Italian naval contribution—both armed and mercantile, was much more important relatively. Italy's merchant marine was almost as large as Germany's at the outbreak of war. Her submarine fleet was considerable, and her surface fleet far in excess of Germany's in all classes of ships. Italy has for three years had the difficult part of the weaker naval adversary, and has suffered accordingly. But her surface fleet is still in being—and a factor of weight. The battleships damaged years ago at Taranto have all been repaired, with possibly one exception. Many lighter ships have been sunk—like much of the merchant marine—but those left afloat are by no means negligible. Italy, indeed, is still containing very considerable Allied naval forces in the Middle Sea.

The Regia Aeronautica does not now play as important a part as its two sister services. It has suffered heavily during the war years. Indeed, even at the start of the present war it held no longer the relatively high status it did during the years when it was directed by Italo Balbo. This refers even to times prior to his death in Africa.

But Italy's armed forces are not her only contribution to the Axis war effort. There is also the highly skilled mechanical and constructional engineering personnel, working both in the home territories and elsewhere in Europe. These must amount to some millions, taking all classes into consideration. All things considered, Italy, though a junior partner, has been much the most important auxiliary of the Germans in Europe.

GERMAN COMMENT

Captain Sertorius, German overseas news commentator, said last night that the Americans attempted to interfere with the Axis movements, disengaging troops along the north coast by thrusting forward from the south, and, at the same time, increased pressure from the west. In both directions the American attacks were repulsed with heavy losses, he stated, and added that the strong American armoured forces, thrusting forwards from north of Enna towards the south-western flank of the Etna mountains, met with a similar fate.

Allied air patrols, Reuter states, are now concentrating on the sector newly occupied by the Axis along the north coast. The port of Milazzo (15 miles west of Messina) across the narrow neck of the peninsula, was raided and many fires started. Road targets in the neighbourhood of Orlando (15 to 20 miles west of Milazzo) were also raided. Light bombers based on Malta are also attacking road communications, it is stated.

Ran into Civic Guards

About 10 o'clock last night a young man broke into a drapery store, The Emerald House, 25 Talbot street, Dublin. He had not been there for more than a few minutes when Civic Guards surrounded the shop. The young man, apparently seeing a Guard outside, attempted to escape, breaking a plate-glass window in his haste. He ran straight into the arms of the waiting Guards and was taken to Store Street Garda Station, where he is being detained.

A.A. Guns in Action

An "alert" was sounded in the London area early this morning. A small number of 'planes approached the Thames estuary, and one or two came in the direction of London. Gunfire was heard and searchlights were active.

A.-A. guns on the outskirts of an East Anglian town were in action several times as 'planes passed over. No bombs were dropped.

Death of Irish Senator

Senator Laurence O'Neill, who had the distinction of being the last Lord Mayor of Dublin under the British régime, died at his residence, Bridge House, Portmarnock, Co. Dublin, last night, aged 69 years.

Born at The Burrows, Portmarnock, in 1874, he received his education at the Christian Brothers' Schools and Belvedere College, later joining his father, the late Mr. John O'Neill, in the management of a corn business in the city. In 1908 he was elected a Councillor for the Rotunda Ward. When, five years later, an aldermanship for the same ward became vacant, he won the seat. He was selected Lord Mayor unanimously in 1917—a position which he held until the Corporation was dissolved in 1924. He presided over the Anti-Conscription Conference in 1918, and was one of the first public men in Ireland to declare for the Treaty. He stood as a candidate for the Dail at the general election in 1922, and was returned with the largest majority in the city.

He toured the United States of America in 1921 in the interests of the Irish White Cross Association, accompanied by the late Cardinal Logue, the late Archbishop Walsh and Mr. de Valera, with the result that £1,374,495 was distributed among people who had suffered during the troubles. He was arrested on suspicion after the 1916 Rising, but was released without any charge being made against him. During the peace negotiations in 1920 he played a useful part in bringing opposing parties and individuals together, and it was in the Mansion House that the Truce was arranged.

In 1929 he was elected to the Senate, and at the general election in 1931 he was re-elected, and continued a member until 1936. In 1940 he again became a member of the Senate.

Additional Senate Nominations

Mr. Wilfrid Brown, Senate Returning Officer, has received the following additional nominations.

Agricultural Panel — Eamonn O'Neill, ex-T.D., Kinsale, farmer; Gerard Sweetman, Longtown, Sallins, Co. Kildare, farmer and solicitor; Patrick O'Reilly, Castlepoles, Arva, Co. Cavan, farmer.

Administrative Panel—Thomas J. McGoldrick, Ballinacar, Sligo, farmer and insurance official.

Radio Eireann Good Music Suggestions

In the annual report of Radio Eireann Director Seamus O Braonain claims that, in spite of the increasing difficulty of introducing novelty, because so much experiment and development have taken place in such a short time, they have given the best possible programmes, and that, though there may be varied opinions on the station's measure of success, listeners' views have in the main been congratulatory.

On the music side, Captain M. A. Bowles suggests that the success of the symphony concerts indicates again the necessity for a concert hall of sufficient capacity to accommodate large audiences. Emphasising the importance of music making in the country, he suggests that, while the station could do much by employing the best artistes and by broadcasting carefully planned, discriminating programmes of gramophone records, the highest results could not be secured without the frequent organisation of first-class concerts in the country. With that object the policy was to encourage musical organisations in the provinces, and to help towards expenses Radio Eireann would relay a portion of each concert at a specially increased fee.

Free Maintenance for Fever Patients

Fever hospital patients are not to be charged by local authorities for ordinary maintenance, stated a Local Government Department letter, read yesterday before Mr. D. J. O'Donovan, Dublin County Commissioner. The Minister, the letter continued, wanted uniform practice on the part of local authorities as regards gratuitous treatment in local hospitals of those suffering from infectious diseases. It was in the interests of the health of the general public that such a person should be isolated in a fever hospital, until there was no danger of the infection spreading, and the law provided for their compulsory removal if necessary. In future only the better-off patients will be apprised of "particulars of the cost of maintenance and treatment in the institution." A voluntary contribution may be made by a patient.

New Make Up Technique Scores with Active Women

Active women — and nowadays that means most women—are all enthusiastic about the new make up method which banishes that smart woman's nightmare —shiny skin. They've found that liquid make up foundation stays matt through the hardest day.

'SHINY SKIN' BUGBEAR BANISHED

BECAUSE the ordinary face cream base is itself shiny, make up in which it is used can't be expected to stay matt once the powder surface wears off. Every woman knew this, and the out-of-doors woman knew that, in warm weather especially the powder surface wore off all too quickly and enforced on her the necessity for frequent 'repair work' with a powder puff.

Until recently there was no remedy for this, but the introduction in America of a liquid foundation has solved the problem. The new make up technique quickly swept the United States and since its introduction into Ireland has been steadily growing in popularity as women who cared about their appearance (and what woman doesn't?) discovered its many advantages.

The new powder base—Miner's Liquid Make Up Foundation—is quickly and easily applied, goes on smoothly, hides minor skin blemishes completely, and stays matt. One application lasts all day, even under trying conditions. Leading chemists now have supplies, in five shades—Naturel, Rachel, Dark Rachel, Blonde Tan and Brunette Tan—at 8d and 1/9.

Jack Doyle Must Win or Retire

JUDGING by the conversation I had with him yesterday, writes our boxing correspondent, Jack Doyle's fight with the Cork heavyweight, Butcher Howell, at Dalymount Park, on Friday week, is going to be a very serious affair.

"If I lose this fight I will hang up my gloves," Doyle said to me, "but if I win it I will have a return with Chris. Cole some time in September."

Doyle confessed to me that he had been slack in his outlook on the Cole fight last month. He had trained, but not sufficiently seriously; he was, quite frankly, taken by surprise at the power of Cole's hitting, but if hard work can win a fight he ought to be a different man against Howell. He is a stone lighter now than when he met Cole, 15st., as against 16st., but he has not been able to solve his main difficulty — securing sparring partners who can hit him hard and thoroughly test both his capacity for taking a punch, and his defensive qualities. If Doyle gets an opening he certainly will hit Howell severely, but whether he can take it himself and come back for more remains to be seen. However, he is really keen to win this contest, and his future in the ring depends on the result.

Two of Ireland's leading amateur boxers, Joe Collins, national fly-weight champion for the current year, and Michael Colbert, bantam-weight champion in 1942, have signed professional forms with Gerald Egan, and will meet on the bill at Dalymount Park on Friday week.

Collins was the outstanding boxer in the last amateur championship meeting at the Stadium in March. His contests with Pte. W. Knowles in the semi-final and J. Foley in the final were the best seen for years between fly-weights. He should have a bright future in professional ranks. Colbert, a clever boxer, lost form at about the period of the championships, but he has been putting up excellent performances recently.

According to a communication from Cork, Butcher Howell is undergoing a strenuous preparation for the fight. The main part of his training is devoted to sparring, and he is helped by a well-known heavy-weight, Barney Hughes (Belfast); 83rd Fennell, and a local amateur cruiser-weight. He winds up with a fast three rounds with Eddie Murphy (welter). Howell is confident of winning inside the distance, and aims to be a hundred per cent. fit for the contest.

Sunday Matches Produce the Best Cricket

By P. D. MacWEENEY.

AS a form of compensation for a rather unexciting and colourless Senior League competition, the Sunday all-day matches, which are becoming increasingly frequent, are producing highly entertaining cricket. The Dublin clubs owe a real debt of gratitude to J. C. Boucher for his energy in organising strong scratch teams to oppose the clubs, and the latter have responded by showing considerably better form than is generally the case on a Saturday.

The game at Sydney parade last Sunday provided a typical example of this. Pembroke's batting has been decidedly erratic—like that of every other side except Phœnix—and they had to take the field without their captain and leading all-rounder, M. B. Williams, and K. C. Dempsey, one of their soundest bats. Even though Boucher was not able to turn out, he had a strong side on paper—Lambert, Connell and Law from Leinster, Pigot from Phœnix, Waldron and Little from Merrion, Ruddock from Clontarf, and Meehan from Civil Service—to make the batting solid; the bowling, perhaps, was less strong than one might imagine, for in support of Mara's fast-medium deliveries, the other five—Little, C. Burgess, of Clontarf, Pigot, Waldron and Lambert—are rather similar in style and the wicket was not helping any bowler.

The scratch team declared at 207 for 8, and had to work hard to reach that total, for neither Pigot nor Lambert, who made most of the runs early on, ever really mastered the slow spinners of P. B. Murphy, and it needed some valuable hitting by Mara for the eighth wicket to pass the 200 mark. However, the score seemed likely to be big enough for victory, but the visiting bowlers little knew what they were in for. In the absence of the usual opening pair, M. B. Williams and Dempsey, Pembroke sent in T. C. Williams and B. Kernan, who made the highest opening stand of the season so far with 120.

Williams has struck a great batting season, but Kernan is not a regular first team man. However, he should make real progress from now onwards, for he has an attractive style, with a big sweep of the bat, and good footwork. He was never afraid to go down the pitch to the slow bowling, and he kept his drives on the ground. Each man seemed to give a possible, but difficult, chance of stumping, but otherwise they made hardly a mistake, the few uppish strokes going clear of the field. They were unlucky not to win the match without being parted, for Williams was out to a short-pitched ball from Waldron, which stood straight up, with only 18 runs needed for victory.

It is a pity that competitive cricket has such a cramping effect on the average batsman here. As Kernan proved, there is talent among a number of the younger players, but they seem to develop a form of paralysis when they are at the wicket in a League or Cup match. It is of interest to note that Kernan was a member of the Pembroke 2nd XI., which was dismissed by Malahide for 26 runs in the final of the Intermediate Cup last Saturday. It was that team's first defeat, and several of the players had some senior experience, but the circumstances overwhelmed men who would be capable of making plenty of runs in a "friendly" encounter.

With the wickets getting harder, runs are becoming more plentiful in the League games, but P. C. Mannion's century for Leinster at Anglesea road on Saturday was rather a surprise. As a match-saver midway down the order, he has been invaluable to Leinster for years past, but who could have expected him to change his methods so completely when sent in to open the batting? His century in eighty minutes was one of the best seen for a very long time.

Sharp Upswing in Stock Exchange Prices

BUOYANCY and animation prevailed on the London Stock Exchange yesterday. Nearly every section of the market participated in the upward swing, particularly Industrials and Mines, but in many cases prices finished under best.

British Celanese were a feature among Rayon issues, jumping 2/9 to the new high record of 28/9. Later, however, they fell back, to finish at 28/4½. Courtaulds gained 6d. at 54/9. A. and S. Henry advanced 1/- Coats 6d., Lancashire Cotton 3d., and Calico Printers 6d. There was a good buying of Stores, and Marks and Spencer put on 1/3 to 52/-, and Woolworth 6d. to 58/3.

Another outstanding movement was in Tripartites, which jumped 2/4½ to 35/-. Among the other good movements were a gain of 6/3 in De La Rue, 2/- in Associated Cement, 9d. in Decca, 6d. in Union Castle, 2/9 in Hudsons Bay, and ¼ in Brazilian Traction. Motor shares generally were firm.

Among Mines, Diamonds rose sharply at first, but failed to hold on to their initial gains. De Beers Defd. finished ½ up at 22½, after 22¾, and Consolidated 9d. up at 45/9, after 47/3. Anglo-American Trust were 66/9, after 67/6.

There were a number of good features in Kaffirs. West Wits rose ½ to 10½, Western Holdings 1/6 to 36/-, Blyvoor 1/3 to 87/6, and Lebanon 1/- to 18/3. Anglo-American Corporation spurted 4/4½ to 88/9. Rhodesian Coppers were good again, and West Africans also gained ground.

Gilt-edged Securities displayed a firm appearance, and there was also inquiry for European Bonds. Czech 8ights, Bulgarian Sevens, Nord Railway and Greek and Hungarian Bonds were the main attraction.

In a firm Oil market, Anglo-Iranian gained 7½d. to £5—a price that has not been reached since 1938.

Hibernian Bank Meeting

The chairman of the Hibernian Bank, Ltd. (Mr. Martin F. F. Mahony), at the ordinary general meeting at College Green, yesterday, said that, in order to save expense, it was proposed to hold an annual meeting instead of half-yearly meetings.

Having regard to all the circumstances of the times, he thought that the position as disclosed by their figures would be regarded as satisfactory.

On the proposal of the chairman, seconded by Mr. S. Hearn Roche, the statement of accounts and report were adopted.

The dividend of 5½ per cent. for the half-year was adopted on the proposal of Mr. [illegible] seconded by Mr. J. F. [illegible]

Junior Teams at Lansdowne

Interest in junior tennis is as keen as ever, and the entries for the Leinster championships, which commenced yesterday at the Lansdowne Club, are as large as usual. The senior boys' competition promises to be of a high standard this week; for, in addition to the four seeded—R. J. McCabe, J. D. Hackett, N. O'C. Brennan and J. C. Davis—there are J. Blayney, G. Rice and H. O'Donoghue. The four seeded girls are Dorothy Miley, Miriam Meenan, Catherine Egan and Adrienne McCabe.

Days of Destiny

The declaration of martial law throughout Italy is a logical, and, indeed, inevitable corollary to Signor Mussolini's resignation. Marshal Badoglio, who has become "Head of the Government," a title held by his predecessor, is, purely and simply, a soldier, who, on more than one previous occasion, was called to Italy's aid in times of dire need; and the drastic steps which have been taken to preserve order in the country must be regarded less as a matter of urgent necessity than as a natural manifestation of the military mind. A curfew has been imposed throughout the Kingdom, and will operate from dusk to dawn, during which period no citizen will be allowed to be abroad. Demonstrations of all kinds have been prohibited, and any gathering of more than three individuals will be dispersed, if necessary, by force. Marshal Badoglio knows his job as a soldier. He seems to have been invested by the King of Italy with dictatorial powers. Nobody knows at present what the next step is likely to be. Marshal Badoglio has made it clear that he proposes to continue the conduct of the war against the Allies; but, if Signor Mussolini's resignation has any significance at all, it obviously must have a profound effect on Italy's general attitude. It manifestly is premature, to say the least of it, to discuss the situation in terms of a separate peace between Italy and the Allies. The Secretary of State in Washington put the point succinctly yesterday when he said that Signor Mussolini's resignation had been brought about by military means, and that, for the time being, the soldiers must remain in full control.

There is one possible development of the change in government which would be welcomed universally; and that is the declaration of Rome as an open city. The recent bombing threw into high relief the perils to which the city was exposed, and if Marshal Badoglio now would declare that Rome is an open city, he would gain the gratitude of millions of people, belligerents and neutrals alike, throughout the civilised world. In the meantime, the campaign in Sicily is being continued. Although the British and Canadians are reported to be making steady progress, the rate of their advance is said to have become slower in consequence of stiffening resistance in the eastern sector of the front. Marshal Badoglio has taken over the immediate command of the Italian Army—its titular commander, now as heretofore, is the King. Fighting in defence of his own soil, the Italian soldier is as good as any soldier in Europe. The Army must realise now that Italy's entire future depends on the measure of resistance that it offers to the Allied invaders. The report that high German officers have been conferring in Rome with Marshal Badoglio suggests that a new plan of campaign is being discussed. It is not yet known whether or not Signor Mussolini, at their recent meeting in Northern Italy, informed Herr Hitler of his intention to resign; but the plans of the German General Staff cannot fail to be affected by the latest turn of events in Italy, and the future stability of the Axis is of just as much concern to Berlin as it is to Rome.

Radio Eireann

The report of Radio Eireann for the year 1942, which has just been published, is in no way a startling document. The new form of the report, in which each department's work is reviewed by the director of that department, leads to a certain lack of cohesion; some of the directors give nothing but a factual history of the year's activities, some endeavour—more satisfactorily—to explain the general principles on which their departments are run. For a general view, then, one is thrown largely upon the preface by the Director of Broadcasting. "The principal objective, the building of interesting and enjoyable programmes with the best material available, has remained unaltered," says Mr. O Braonain; and it cannot be argued that such an objective ought to be altered. How far it has been achieved, to the satisfaction of the listener, the Director owns himself unable to say. There is plenty of matter for commendation. The musical department rightly congratulates itself upon the success of the public symphony concerts sponsored by the station; and the Director, Captain Bowles, goes on to speak of the efforts made to extend some similar opportunities to the provinces. Concerts by local musical societies were sponsored by relaying the performances at a specially increased fee; for it was felt that, "in order to develop the art of music throughout the country, it is not sufficient merely to give a lead in Dublin. . . . The country clearly must make its own efforts." This excellent scheme might be extended still further if it were made possible to send the new choir and the augmented orchestra on a national tour. In many ways the musical section is the most satisfying, as it is the most interesting, section of the report. It is distressing, however, to find that both the Director of Broadcasting and the Musical Director carefully ignore any explanation of, or excuse for, the ban imposed recently on jazz music. It is impossible to enter here, once again, into discussion of the merits of the ban; the opinion of listeners, for which the Director asks on general issues, was made clear on this particular one; and one must feel that Captain Bowles is begging the question, if he backhandedly excludes jazz when he mentions "discriminating" programmes of gramophone records. Apart from this, one feature of the report must be noted—the absence of any direct reference to finance. The listener is entitled, after all, to know exactly what has happened to his twelve and sixpence. He is entitled to know how much of that sum is actually going to the provision of broadcasting programmes, and how much to the general revenues of the Post Office; why the hours of transmission are still so limited; what fees are paid to artists and writers, and whether their meagre size explains the fact that "the best material available" is by no means synonymous with the best material in Ireland. A frank discussion of the finances of the station would do much to relieve the ordinary man of his suspicion that his licence fee is still regarded by the Minister as "pennies from heaven," and not as a cash payment for ... to be delivered.

Costing a Crocodile

It is a matter of considerable difficulty to the ordinary man to decide the value of a crocodile. The supply, of course, is strictly limited; but, on the other hand, the demand can rarely be described as brisk. These occidental values, however, weigh very little in the Trobriand Islands, where the crocodile is rather more sought after than in the drawing-rooms of Rathgar. According to a list issued officially to the American troops, a crocodile is worth half a stick to two sticks of tobacco, according to its size; and the value of a stick of tobacco may be computed readily when it is learned that it is the price of twenty-five pounds of yams. The raw recruit, off on a week-end's leave with his sticks of tobacco jingling—do they jingle?—in his pocket, may well be inveigled into squandering them upon either yams or crocodiles; and that puts him in a difficult position. There is no point in trying to find out what to do with a yam—he does not even know what a yam is, unless it be a dance by Fred Astaire; but what of the crocodile? A more useless type of livestock can scarcely be acquired; it cannot be ridden or driven, it cannot easily be stuffed, and its disadvantages as a household pet—apart from its unpleasant nature—are too numerous to mention. At this stage, the "doughboy" will consult his list again, and discover that his crocodile—if it is a large one, and worth two sticks—may be exchanged for a bush pig or a grass skirt. Feeling rather silly, he will hand over the scaly monster and receive instead a handful of grass, which he can only keep as a present for a hula-hula dancer or use to light a fire. Such are the pitfalls of "swapping." Barter may be a picturesque method of trading, but it requires a nicely controlled temperament and the balanced judgment of a quantity surveyor. Like the hero in the pantomime, the impetuous "swapper" is too likely to begin with a cow and end with a bag of beans; and the latter cannot always be relied upon to land all the principal characters in a rapturous Grand Finale.

OBITUARY

MR. W. Fitz-GERALD

We regret to announce the death of Mr. William Fitz-Gerald, which took place yesterday at his residence, 13 Raglan road, Dublin. By his death sport in Ireland loses a man who had been for years one of its outstanding and most popular figures. He was a son of the late Mr. Thomas Fitz-Gerald, who was for a long period in the last century Crown Solicitor for Derry and Donegal. Mr. Thomas Fitz-Gerald was a member of one of Ireland's most notable legal families, as he was brother of the late Lord Fitz-Gerald, who was a Lord of Appeal, and uncle of Mr. David Fitz-Gerald, who became a County Court Judge, and Mr. Gerald Fitz-Gerald, who became a Judicial Commissioner to the Irish Land Court.

Mr. William Fitz-Gerald was educated at Oscott and Beaumont Colleges and afterwards entered the firm of stockbrokers in which he later became a partner and then owner. He was one of the oldest members of the Dublin Stock Exchange. He was also chairman for 11 years of the Catholic Insurance Co.

His chief interest outside his work was in sport, and in particular polo. He was President of the All-Ireland Polo Club, was a member of a cup-winning team at the age of 75, and continued playing polo till five or six years ago. He was also one of the oldest members of the Royal Irish and Royal St. George Yacht Clubs, and took a great interest in yacht racing. He also belonged to several important golf clubs and race clubs in the vicinity of Dublin, and to the Kildare Street and Carlton Clubs. He was also very fond of hunting, and for many years hunted with the Ward and Meath Hunts, with frequent visits to Minehead over a period of 40 years, where he hunted with Somerset and Devonshire Staghounds. No event in the life of Dublin gave him so much pleasure as the Horse Show, when he kept virtually open house for his numerous friends.

He travelled a great deal especially in his younger days, and lived for some time in Russia. He was one of the first people ever to cycle in that country. He was also very fond of mountaineering and spent many vacations in the Alps.

His first wife, who was a sister of the late General Waldron, died about 25 years ago, and he later married Lady Winifred Weldon, O.B.E., the widow of the late Colonel Sir Anthony Weldon, C.V.O., D.S.O.

During Mr. Fitz-Gerald's exceptionally long and useful life, he gained the respect of all classes of the community without distinction of creed or party. He was a liberal supporter of all good works and one of those Irishmen whom we can ill afford to lose. In public he was a man of retiring disposition, but in private life he was more expansive. His friends were many, and no citizen of Dublin was more respected.

LORD WEDGWOOD

Lord Wedgwood, the Labour peer, died yesterday at his London home, aged 71. Early in June he went into a London hospital, suffering from the effects of a heart attack, but about a month ago he was removed to his home at his own request. A gradual improvement in his condition followed, and later he was reported to be out of danger, but in the last week he became worse again.

The Hon. Francis Charles Bowen Wedgwood, elder son of Lord Wedgwood, succeeds to the Barony. He is 45, and served with the R.N.V.R. and the R.F.C. in the last war. He lives in South Africa, and has a son aged 22.

NEW PROPOSALS FOR EDUCATION IN BRITAIN

COMING almost on the heels of Britain's war-time plan for post-war educational reconstruction, the report of the Norwood Committee, appointed in October, 1941, by the President of the British Board of Education to advise on suggested changes in the school curriculum and the related question of school examinations, has recommended rather drastic changes in the secondary education system.

The Government have already announced as their policy that secondary education will be provided for all children in three types of schools—grammar, modern and technical—and the Committee, presided over by Sir Cyril Norwood, President of St. John's College, Oxford, now advises that preliminary allocation of pupils to the appropriate school should be based on parents' wishes and school records kept by the primary teachers, supplemented, if desired, by intelligence or other tests. The selection would be made at the age of about 11, and transfer from one type of school to another in the secondary system is provided for by the suggested creation of lower schools, in which during the ages 11-13 students would be observed by teachers charged with the special responsibility of recommending the school most appropriate in each case. The proposals may ultimately lead to the abolition of the external examination system at the age of 16.

A reformation of the school certificate examination is proposed in two stages — the examination becoming, for a transitional period, a subject examination, in which there would be complete freedom in the choice of subjects, and the existing requirement of qualifying in a minimum number of subjects taken from certain groups would be abolished. Every candidate would receive a certificate indicating his examination performance and school record, thus giving employers, professional bodies and universities much more information about the pupil as an individual than the present type of certificate. Ultimately, it is envisaged, the examination would become an internal one conducted by the schools themselves instead of by the university examining bodies through a standing committee of teachers and local authority representatives. It is also proposed to abolish the present Higher Certificate Examination, and that an examination without syllabus for pupils of 18 should be conducted twice a year for the strictly limited purposes of clearing matriculation and the requirements of the professional bodies, etc., the pupils taking the subjects required for the particular purpose in view.

Dealing with the curriculum, the report holds, as being essential to a good education, the training of the body, training of character, with special reference to religious education, and training in habits of clear thought and expression.

GAELIC LEAGUE JUBILEE

An Taoiseach (Mr. de Valera) will open the Gaelic League Golden Jubilee Exhibition in the National Museum to-morrow at 11.30 a.m.

The jubilee celebrations will conclude on Sunday next with a public march through the city. Many T.D.s, Senators, representatives of Corporations and County Councils will take part, as well as representatives from London, Liverpool and Manchester. The president of the Gaelic League, Diarmuid Mac Fhionnlaoich, will address the assembly when the procession reaches Stephen's Green.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON.
MONDAY NIGHT.

AT the annual meeting of the National Trust this afternoon it was revealed that since 1939 the yearly average increase in the acreage actually owned by the Trust has been greater than the whole area owned twenty years ago, and that the Trust will own 100,000 acres within a matter of months. The properties acquired during the past year have been the most varied and important in its history. No longer are its estates restricted to open and uncultivated lands of comparatively small extent, and to ancient buildings which were in danger of becoming ruins. On the contrary, besides forests, downs and moorlands and castles and cottages, representative of various periods of English history, the Trust now owns large tracts of cultivated land, including 200 farms, 800 cottages and great mansions, housing, collections of valuable pictures and furnishings standing in their appropriate settings of gardens and parks.

Country Houses

The Trust already owns 23 houses of the country house type, intended for preservation, and at least a further 40 will come to it in the near future either by gift or by will, while preliminary discussions are taking place with the owners of many more. It is intended to use them as centres of adult education, possibly as holiday or rest homes in the post-war period. During the year Cliveden (Lord Astor), Killerton House (Sir Richard Ackland), and Dorneywood, Bucks (Sir Courtauld Thomson) were added. Dorneywood, on Sir Courtauld's death is to be an official residence of a Secretary of State, or another Minister, during his term of office. Sir Richard Ackland's Killerton Estate includes 4,500 acres of farmland, a village, and over 1,000 acres of forest. His Holnicote Estate, also donated, includes 6,100 acres of moor and woodland, and 4,500 acres of farm and woodland. These estates together form the largest single acquisition of the Trust, and are being endowed to provide not only for upkeep, but to provide, over a term of years, a substantial surplus available for the general work of the Trust.

School Age Controversy

Mr. J. Duthie Webster, well-known shorthorn breeder, whose herd is world-famous, is objecting to the Government's plan to raise the school-leaving age to 15, and has given notice that he will move a protest at the next meeting of the Aberdeen County Council. We should follow the example of our forefathers and give the "lad o' pairts" every encouragement—more encouragement than he is getting now—but the boys and girls who want to work with their hands and do not desire more learning should be allowed to leave school at 14, he declared yesterday.

Centenary of Mackintosh

The centenary to-day of the death of Charles Mackintosh, inventor of the waterproof overcoat, has received due notice in the drapery Press. Mackintosh, a Glasgow man, opened Scotland's first alum works in 1797, when he was 33. It was when experimenting with coal naphtha obtained in the distillation of tar that he accidentally made the first piece of waterproof material. His factory at Manchester, started in 1824, is still going strong, and now occupies many acres.

Industrial De-rating

The Bucks County Council, in common with many others, is urging the abolition of the de-rating of industrial premises. Under the Local Government Act, 1929, industrial premises had their rateable value written down three-quarters, and since then a formidable burden has been carried by the rest of the community. When the Act came into force the depression in industry was acute. If it was of some benefit in the early thirties, in the vast majority of cases, such relief is unnecessary to-day.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Eggs

I am not really aggrieved when I see currants and raisins on sale in Dublin at prices several hundred per cent. higher than those prevailing across the border. Admittedly a cheap supply would make a world of difference to the kids, but, after all, these things are luxuries.

What does annoy me, on the other hand, is the recent jump in the prices of eggs. 3½d. to 4d. for an egg, in the plentiful season, is really rather steep. And I refuse to be interested in the excuse, offered by a shopkeeper, that better prices can be obtained in England than in Dublin.

The case for price control—with or without a ban on the export of eggs in such quantity as to leave this country in short supply—seems to me unanswerable.

May Carey

Meeting May Carey in the street the other day, I stopped to congratulate her on the success of the recent productions of the Dublin Theatre Guild, of which she is a director; and I learnt that, as I expected, she is already hard at work selecting plays for the next season.

Blood and grease-paint are thicker than water. May Carey has three sons; as each of them grew up she warned him solemnly of the precariousness of life on the stage; and each, promptly, went on the stage. One of them is now married to that delightful actress, Vivien Dillon. Mrs. Carey has managed to be a model housewife and mother, and at the same time to carry on a distinguished career in the theatre—not so easy!

But it is her abiding interest in youth that most endears her to me. She gives a personal assistance, very rare in professionals, to amateur companies, especially the Dublin University Players, of which her boys were members; she is always ready to be a friend and a critic to the young actor, and her patience in training inexperienced players is a marvel to behold. If we ever have an Academy of Dramatic Art, she is the ideal professor.

The Zoo

One has occasion to reflect so often on the lack of civic amenities in Dublin that it is good for the soul to contemplate now and again those that exist. With this idea in mind, I followed again yesterday the direction of the notices that say: "Visit the Zoo."

I have not been there, I think, since before the war, and certainly there have been some changes. Only one elephant; no seals at all (how melancholy the notice, "Slinky is dead—killed by a peanut"!); bison either gone or removed to some corner which I was unable to find. On the other hand, the improvements have been great, and I could see that the visitors — the children especially—were thoroughly enjoying the sunny afternoon in the grounds.

The most attractive single feature, and one worthy of expansion, is the Children's Corner; and playing with the furry creatures there—especially the white mice—quite consoled my own small guest for the regrettable lack of giraffes.

And then—What?

Myself, I was drawn, as always, to the bear pit, to see the obese Himalayan bears sitting blinking in the sunshine, with the white rings round their necks, for all the world like so many stout Lord Mayors presiding over city banquets.

Eventually I finished up with a cup of tea on the balcony of the admirable café; and as I looked out on the bright lawns I began to grow discontented again. Why, I wondered, is the Zoo the only place that one can spend an afternoon like this? Why not a modern open-air swimming-pool (mixed, of course), with lawns around it, and a similar café where one could sip a drink during the heat of the day?

If Dublin is becoming one of Ireland's holiday resorts, it would be well worth while to open up a scheme of that sort. Many continental and English cities have such swimming pools. I am sure that the people would be duly grateful if any of our magnates cared to perpetuate his name by endowing the project.

QUIDNUNC.

JUNIOR BANK CLERKSHIPS

Characterising it as unjust, hateful to all who believed in equality of opportunity, and contrary to the spirit of the Constitution, a letter in the current issue of the "Vocational Education Bulletin" strongly condemns the action of the Central Bank in confining appointment of its junior male clerkships to secondary school students who have passed the Leaving Certificate examination with honours and who have obtained honours in mathematics.

"This discrimination in favour of the secondary schools," it states, "is intolerable, inasmuch as it shuts the doors of certain employments financed wholly or partly by the taxpayers and controlled in one way or another by the State, against the majority of the young people eligible for them—not upon grounds of lack of qualifications or character, but simply because they do not attend secondary schools. By excluding the vast majority of students from competing, this policy is calculated to rob the public services of some of the best talent available and sets a high premium upon social snobbery. It is unfortunate that the Central Bank should be found on the side of reactionary monopoly of public employment. The only fair system of recruitment for the public and kindred services is one based on the principle of open competition."

The letter is written by the general secretary of the Vocational Education Officers' Organisation.
